Scanner Reports 7-24-15

updated: Jul 24, 2015, 7:00 AM

Roger the Scanner Guy

Thank Dog it's FRYday. What a week; anger, hate, rage, greed, insanity, and parking lots for NIMBYS. When my friend Belinda passed away, they came out of the woodwork like roaches for her trust fund. They all felt entitled to it. All her so-called loved ones. I am forever grateful for her as my friend on this rock and I hope it continues after I go but I don't want nothing to do with her family or their money. Her Uncle was the first to come up here. He would hold some type of memorial burning sage, chanting then trying to get in my pants thinking I was in line to score her cash. He got into a debate with one of my neighbors on how he was entitled to get the loot. Next was Auntie. I called her to speak about Belinda's passing and she tried to convince me that it was Belinda's fault for her misery. That was when I hung up. Her brothers and sister was the ones that were to get the trust fund. I did not care about Belinda's money. I loved Belinda for who she was. The money wasn't important to me, her family a lot less important. When her uncle came up here and started talking about that trust fund like it was his, I wanted to pound him. I had this overwhelming feeling to smash his face. Belinda's voice in my head don't...don't...don't.

Well now he's contacting me again via the internet. I just delete his messages like the nanny deletes my comments. Feels kinda good being the nanny for a second. I still feel horrible over Belinda's death; I regret not checking on her that night. I always checked on her I thought she was ok the one time I did not check she wasn't ok. They never had a memorial. They played favorites, picking and choosing who they wanted or didn't to show up for a memorial. None of them were there for her in life. But they are all there for the money. It's too bad I'm not one of those people with headaches that only murder can cure. My insane life is a living memorial to my Belinda. I take her with me wherever I go which isn't very far. I'm glad we found each other for the short period of time we did. Tell your loved ones you love them because in the blink of an eye they can be gone. I'm not just saying that it happens; do not take someone you love for granted. I always talk to Belinda and tell her I love her. People look at me like I'm crazy but I don't care.

Then there's the Internet and all the Mud Slinging and Back Stabbing that goes with it. Is this Dodge City back in the Day? Get outta town by Sun Down or else. Ya Know the Top Dog put us all on this Earth together and He or She had one request that we all get along. I think I'm just going to get a Bong. I'm giving up on getting along with everyone. Some people seem to get off on Hate and that is not for me. I don't enjoy it as much as I used to.

Has anyone experienced pulling into a parking spot only to notice that it's taken not by a vehicle, motorcycle, or motorized transportation of any kind but by a breathing living human being? Parking spots have become camp sites for some people. I would NEVER camp in a parking spot, especially not in Santa Barbara where people take their parking too serious and might actually try and park on top of someone unless of course it was a Handicapped spot and the person sleeping in the parking spot has a Handicapped placard around their neck.

Here's thy blessed Scanner Roni Reports, Wednesday:

Sure has been a few calls over at the MTD lately. Is someone trying to take over the roundabout over there or what? I haven't taken a bus in a year of Sundays. I used to take the bus every day back in the day, going to work at 7am in Goleta. I think it's been 20 years since I took a bus. Anyway, that's enough outta me for now. Have a great weekend. Belinda and Pooh Bear willing, we will see you on Monday. Later, Roger
